Summary of scientific research

The main topics of scientific research and teaching can be summarised on two levels. First: Catholic social doctrine: this research was started studying the origins of the Papal social encyclicals in the Vatican archives publishing for the first time the history of Rerum Novarum and Quadragesimo Anno. The book Katholische Soziallehre (1992) contains the full text of the social encyclicals together with a commentary. Besides this scientific research the same Catholic social doctrine has been taught for 25 years at the Pontifical University Gregoriana, Rome. Second: The relation between the Church and modern society. This research has been based upon a scientific study of the religious beliefs of industrial workers and has been enlarged into a general theory of the relation between religion and industrial and post-industrial societies.
